Held in Strangle Murder—Ralph Duchaceck, Jr., 13-year-old Ashland newsboy, climbs stairway with State Trooper Dennis Shea at Framingham court today before he pleaded not guilty in the strangle slaying of Mrs. Dorothy Swenson, 40, one of his newspaper customers, and was held without bail.

Strike Off; Mine Owners Sign Up

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—An agreement under which 150,000 of the nation's soft coal miners will work when "willing and able" at the highest wage in history was signed today.

Harry M. Moses, representing the steel companies, and Charles O'Neill, of the Northern commercial operators, signed for their operations.

Other operators from the Midwest and the Far West, who employ an additional 150,000 miners, were waiting their turn to put their signature to the pact, negotiated by Moses and O'Neill in days of dickering.

This leaves only the Southern group, producing approximately 25 per cent of the national bituminous output, outside the ranks of those ready to capitulate to Lewis' new contract terms.

Even the Southern operators appeared resigned to follow suit but called a meeting among themselves to consider the legal phraseology in the new pact before officially committing themselves.

The signing of the contract was arranged at headquarters of Lewis' United Mine Workers.

One operator after another piled out of limousines and taxicabs and made his way into Lewis' office for the ceremony.

The miners are now idle, but only a word from Lewis is needed to send them back to the mines. The union strategy board ratified the agreement last night, but the formal signing by both sides was delayed.

This meant that the miners, who finished a 10-day vacation last night, would continue idle until Lewis notified them to return to work. They could be back on the job at the 3 p. m. shifts.

Hub Joins Nation in Disc Hunt

Greater Boston today had joined the rest of the nation in the latest dizzy diversion of discerning the discs, or "flying saucers."

The mysterious diametrical objects, which have already been reported from 40 states, are now reported as having been spotted as they whisked at low altitude over Milton, Squantum, Salem and Marblehead and then whirled seaward.

They're as big as manhole covers, said one excited discer.

Another said they float, while still another insisted they can remain at a standstill in the air.

They vary in size from the proportions of a five-room house to a pie pan. They are messengers from Mars.

The color range describes them as silvery, as dark brown and as grayish, while a Dorchester resident said the saucers he saw were pinkish in color.

A group of four persons, including Ernest Willson, a research and development engineer, his wife Mary, sister Ella, and a friend Paul Doldt, were seated in the back yard of their Capen st. home in Milton when they saw four of the discs pass overhead.

"They seemed to be tilting up and down just like the motion of a piece of slate when thrown into the air," Willson said.

Call Saucers Figment of Eye, Imagination

NEW YORK, July 8 (INS)—Astronomers, psychologists, opthalmologists and other scientists ventured today to explain the mysterious "flying discs" or "saucers" which skygazers report soaring over most states of the country.

The flying missiles say the scientists are a figment of the eye, seasoned with a little imagination.

A New York scientist and engineer, William R. Dodds, explains that if you stare at the blue sky long enough you will see swirling spots not unlike saucers or discs. The spots are red blood corpuscles moving across the retina of the eye.

Psychology Prof. F. S. Cotton of Sydney University, Australia, reported 22 of his students had seen saucers after staring at a fixed point in the sky during an experiment.

North Carolina Joins Disc Parade

By the Associated Press

America's "flying saucer" jag reeled on today. Stiff necks and goggle eyes were the order of the day. Sky watching was a new profession.

North Carolina joined the disc parade.

Tabulators quickly figured. Forty-one states had joined the disc brigade since the objects first were reported June 25.

The World Inventors Congress posted $1000 for delivery of a flying disc to the exposition which opens in Los Angeles July 11.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corp., who helped break the contract deadlock a week ago by capitulating to Lewis' full wage demands, hailed the new pact as likely to result in "industrial peace in the bituminous industry for a long time to come."

HE CAUGHT ONE — Rev. Joseph Brasky of Grafton, Wis., thought he had one of the mysterious flying discs when this steel plate went whizzing by him. Investigation proved, however, that the disc was the blade which snapped off a nearby buzz saw.

Kidnaped Reporter Tells All

By HAL BOYLE

ABOARD A FLYING SAUCER Over Pitcher, Okla., July 8 (AP)—Don't tell me these flying discus are imaginary. Here I am in the middle of one, zooming around the American landscape like a boomerang.

These things aren't discs or saucers at all. They're built like a cowboy hat seven stories tall.

The reason you folks down below have been disagreeing about the size is you haven't seen the whole thing.

All you have seen is the reflection of the sides where patches of the infra-invisible paint were burned off these huge space ships as they passed too close to the sun on their way here from Mars.

Yes, Mars! I am a prisoner aboard a 1947 model "flying saucer" from another planet. Let me explain:

I left the New York Public Library at dusk the other day and dropped into a quiet bar to wash down a warm vitamin pill with a cold bottle of beer.

Finishing it, I turned to a silent figure next to me—the only other customer at the bar—and all but fainted.

I saw a thing some eight feet tall, covered with thick green hair, with one eye like a hard-boiled egg in the center of his forehead, and no visible mouth at all. He was naked, his hands were three-clawed and big enough for a Brooklyn center fielder.

Labor Bill Futile Against Petrillo

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—Two Republican lawmakers said today the new Taft-Hartley labor act is powerless to block James C. Petrillo if he decides finally to ban radio network musical programs and phonograph recordings by his union musicians.

The president of the AFL American Federation of Musicians first told a House labor subcommittee that "as of now" those are his plans for next year.

After a luncheon recess, however, he said, "I'm in hopes that somewhere along the line we won't have to do the things I said we'd have to do this morning."

Both Chairman Kearns (R.) of Pennsylvania, and Rep. Nixon (R.) of California, a subcommittee member, expressed the opinion that the Taft-Hartley act will not "stop Petrillo from going ahead with this if he wants to."

Both lawmakers said they do not see how the musicians' refusal to make records or to take part in network shows could invoke the court injunction provision of the new labor law because that section applies only where the public welfare is jeopardized.

Bevin Calls Marshall Plan Europe's Hope

PARIS, July 8 (AP)—British Foreign Secretary Bevin said today the Marshall aid-to-Europe proposal might yet make the greatest contribution to international amity, but indications from the East were that states in the Soviet orbit, with one exception, would stay away from the Paris conference.

Bevin, indicating the dor still was open to Russia, said the program was purely economic. He added that religious or ideological prejudices should be ruled out of the discussions.

Only Czechoslovakia of nations ni the Soviet sphere has accepted formally the British-French invitation to the Russian-boycotted talks which begin Saturday.

Romania, Poland and Yugoslavia were reported planning to avoid the meeting. Albanian, Bulgarian and Hungarian circles in London felt those three states would also stay away.

Finland has indicated that geographical and political reasons may keep her away from Paris, but Finnish politicians felt cabinet discussions now under way in Helsinki might result in sending an observer.

Norway, Denmark and Sweden will confer tomorrow in Copenhagen to determine their attitude. They will join in the Paris talks, their London diplomatic representatives said, if convinced the program would not lead to a division of Europe.

Switzerland's Federal Council today accepted the invitation in principle.

BIRD BLUNDER

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., July 8 (AP)—A sparrow which tried to build a lighted cigaret into its attic nest was looking for new quarters today.

The cigaret set off the nest and started a blaze in the attic of a two-story house here. Only minor damage was reported, but firemen hastily cleared out what was left of the nest.

Mystery Clouds Ashland Boy's Story of Killing

ASHLAND, July 8—The laundry-bag strangle slaying of attractive Mrs. Dorothy Swenson, 41, of Union st., took a mystery turn today despite police announcement that Ralph Duchaceck, Jr., 13, a seventh grade honor student, had confessed the crime. Duchaceck pleaded innocent to a murder charge in Framingham district court today and was held without bail for a hearing July 15.

Young Duchaceck, according to Capt. Joseph Crescio, head of the State Police detective bureau, confessed that he knocked down Mrs. Swenson—one of his paper route customers — last Thursday night, stuffed her head into a laundry bag and knotted the cord around her throat. Her slacks and halter-clad bod ywas found sprawled in her dining room, the feet extending over the threshold into the kitchen.

But one of the murder victim's neighbors reported today that she saw Mrs. Swenson Saturday afternoon—two days after she allegedly was slain—walking wih a man on Union st.

This report, coupled with the fact that young Duchaceck's "confession" gave no motive for the crime, and the disclosure that three persons were in the neat little Swenson cottage home on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and did not see the body, confronted detectives today with all the elements of a first-class mystery.

The name of the neighbor who said she saw Mrs. Cwenson on Saturday was not disclosed. She told her story to the accused youth's father, Ralph Duckaceck, Sr.

Also conflicting with the police story of Duchaceck's admission of the slaying are the stories of Kenneth J. Bradstreet, Jr., 18, a boy friend of Barbara Swenson, 17-year-old daughter of the victim, and John Shaughnessy, 15, another newsboy who delivered Sunday papers to the Swenson home.

Bradstreet told investigators that he was in the Sewenson house on Friday morning to deliver fish. He said he went into the kitchen, called out, and, receiving no answer, left the fish on the kitchen table. He said he glanced into the dining room, but did not see Mrs. Swenson's body.

The following day, Saturday, a postman made a mail delivery at Swenson's, leaving several letters in the front hall. He did not see anything to attract suspicion.

On Sunday morning, Shaughnesey aso went to the house. He found the front door open, went into the hallway, glanced into the living room and went to a tabel to look for 31 cents to collect for the delivery. He said he shouted, "Papers! Papers!" but getting no answer left the newspapers and went out.

BARBARA SWENSON, 17
Discovered Mother's Body

Commenting on Bradstreet's story that he had not seen the body altthought he glanced into the dining room, investigators said it was possible that the body was in such a position that it might not have been observed except on close inspection.

Also baffling detectives was the utter lack of motive. Police said a thorough examination showed no indication that Mrs. Swenson had been criminally attacked or that anything was stolen from her house. Also lacking were any signs of a struggle.

Young Duchaceck was questioned at length before any arrest was mode. Police Chief Walter Schouler of Ashland, who signed the murder complaint, said that suspicion was first directed toward him when the boy's story of what Mrs. Swenson was wearing when he say her Thursday did not fibe with the shorts and a halter in which she was found dead.

A medical examiner's report said that Mrs. Swenson had been dead from 24 to 72 hours when the body was found. The victim was discovered by her daughter, Barbara, about 12:30 p. m. yesterday. If she had been dead 72 hours, this would place the time of the murder at some time no earlier than Friday. Duchaceck said he went to the house on Thursday night to collect his money for the delivery of daily newspapers.

A high-strung youth, whose "confession" took his parents by complete surprise and left them bewildered, Duchaceck was stoical when arraigned today before Special Justice Winfield Temple. His parents were in court, and his mother, nervously chewing a pencil, kept repeating: "I can't understand it. I can't understand it for the life of me."

Duchaceck was represented by Atty. Anthony DiCicco, Jr., of Framingham, a former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County.

The accused youth, red-faced and with his head bowed, peered sideways at his parents in the courtroom. When Clerk of Courts Louis W. Farley read the complaint that he "did assault and beat Mrs. Swenson with intent to murder her and by such assault and beating did murder her," Duchaceck raised his head.

"Not guilty," he answered in a firm clear voice.

Capt. Crescio said that he and State Police Lts. Daniel Murphy and Andrew Trodden were present when the youth confessed the crime.

After the dramatic confession, in which the boy could give no motive for the murder, police called his father, Ralph Duchaceck, Sr., and left them alone together in an ante-room at Framingham barracks.

It was then that father and son both broke down as the youngster told his Dad everything.

The father, who has two other children and is a chemist for a nationally known dyeworks, today told the Boston Evening American everything that his son had sobbed out to him.

He, himself, cried intermittently and declared he likewise could not understand what had prompted the act.

The father told the American reporter this story;

"I can't yet believe all of this even though Ralphie told me so himself.

"They (state police) came here to my house and asked to speak to Ralphie. They wanted to question him about the last time he saw Mrs. Swenson—in-

Savage, last seen by his friends in Quincy July 4, left a note indicating he "might do harm to himself," according to Capt. George H. Fallon of the Quincy police. He disclosed Savage's disappearance today after Boston police notified him they had found the Quncy man's car, keys in the ignition, parked on the Summer st. bridge.

The automobile had been there several days, according to police of the Milk st. station.

Mrs. Charlotte Savage, his wife and mother of a daughter, Catherine, 6, notified Quincy authoritis at 4 a. m. this morning her husband had been missing.

Savage, 36, is a graduate of Boston University Law School. His law associates in Quincy are Robert Zottoli, a relative of Judge Joseph Zottoli, and Russell Riley.

His hat and top coat were found there today.

4 Speedy Passage in House Predicted for Tax Slash Bill

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—The Republican-backed tax-cutting bill came back into the House today on its second journey to President Truman's desk, and Speaker Martin (R.) of Massachusetts said, "It will pass by an avalanche of votes" before nightfall.

SHE'S OUT $5400—Actress Sally Haines has failed in her attempt to get back $5400 impounded by the state of New York during investigation of the $780,000 Mergenthaler Swindle. The money was found in a safe deposit box opened by investigators.

The measure is identical with the one Mr. Truman vetoed June 16 as "the wrong kind of tax reduction at the wrong time"—except that the reduction would be effective Jan. 1, 1948 instead of July 1, 1947.

Chairman Knutson (R.) of Minnesota, of the House ways and means committee, author of both bills, said the new one "meets the President more than half way."

Martin told reporters he expected the House to pass the measure "with 20 or more votes to spare over the two-thirds" needed to overthrow another veto.

He said he would not be surprised to see a majority of the Democrats voting for the bill.

Most administration supporters pinned their main hopes on the Senate, where sponsors of the legislation still are unable to name more than 61 senators who would vote to override a veto. That is three short of the number needed if all the 95 senators were to vote on the issue.

A fight also is building up in the Senate over demands that the so-called community property principle now applicable in 12 states be extended to all states.

Sen. McClellan (D.) of Arkansas, a leading proponent of the plan to let all husbands and wives divide their income for lower tax purposes, told a reporter today he will not vote to override a Presidential veto unless the measure contains such a clause.

Here's how Republican measure works:

1—A 30 per cent cut on taxable incomes of $1000 or less (income after exemptions and deductions).

2—A 30 to 20 per cent cut on incomes between $1000 and $1400.

3—A 20 per cent cut on taxable incomes between $1400 and $137,000.

4—A 15 per cent reduction on income between $137,000 and $302,000.

5—A 10.5 per cent cut on any income over $302,000.

Barnes Hints Insiders' Coup In El Stock

Atty. Gen. Barnes hinted strongly today that speculators with inside information had purchased stock of the Boston Elevated Railway shortly before the Legislature approved purchase of the system by the State.

At a hearing before Superior Judge Charles C. Cabot on a petition by the El for a temporary injunction against actual transfer of the system to the Metropolitan Transit Authority, Barnes said:

"If I may say so, many purchasers of the stock are very recent ones." He paused several seconds before continuing his argument against issuance of the injunction.

In making his thinly veiled accusation, Barnes referred to a remark by Atty. James C. Reilly, counsel for the El's directors and stockholders. Reilly had said dismissal of the injunction petition would jeopardize the rights of many stockholders throughout the country.

The El is seeking the injunction pending a decision as to who pays a federal capital gains tax of $5,250,000 when the actual purchase of the system is consummated. Reilly contended the 1947 act permitting the purchase by the State conflicts with a statute of 1931.

The present act, which expires Aug. 30, if the system does not revert to the State by then, releases the State from all liabilities after a purchase of the stock at $85 a share. That, said Reilly, would force present stockholders to pay the capital gains tax.

Reilly said if the injunction is not granted, the El will pursue the matter to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Solon Charges Army Courts Stacked Against GI Defendants

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—Sen. Jenner (R.) of Indiana contended today that "the high command in the European theater is stacking courts against defendants in courts-martial." In a letter to War Sec. Patterson demanding full investigation of Army military trial procedure, Jenner offered what he said was documentary proof that:

1—"Prisoners are not being permitted to employ either civilian or military counsel of their own choice in the preparation and presentation of their defense."

2—"Every effort is being made to prevent attorneys who were connected with the infamous Lichfield prison case to practice in courts-martial in the European theater."

The Indiana Senator made public a copy of an informal "routing slip" which he said was signed by Brig. Gen. Cornelius E. Ryan, assistant deputy, military government headquarters for the military government for Germany, and written by Col. Francis H. Venderwerker. Jenner told newsmen that the routing slip substantiated his charges.

The slip, addressed to the chief of staff, USFET (presumably U. S. Forces, European Theater), was dated last Oct. 23.

It called attention to the impending arrival of Earl J. Carroll and Thomas Lester Foley, California attorneys, to act as special defense counsel for five prisoners then awaiting trial by general court-martial at Frankfurt Am Main.

Jenner identified Carroll as counsel in the court-martial of Col. James A. Kilian in the Lichfield (England) prison brutality case.

The routing slip said that Carroll had received widespread publicity "by violent attacks on the system of military justice" and added "it is understood Foley is an individual of similar propensities."

"It is probable, in view of their past conducts, that Carroll and Foley will again use every device known to clever civilian criminal lawyers, to prolong trials unnecessarily and to introduce large masses of evidence, which are irrelevant to the issues in the trial, most seriously damaging to this command and the Army.

The communication ended with a request for assignment of some "alert and thoroughly competent lawyers" for the prosecution.

Jenner said the routing slip came into the hands of Carroll June 18, and that Carroll phoned Foley in California and Foley transcribed the document.

Jenner added that Foley wrote him saying "the system of military justice as administered in headquarters command was so abhorrent to me as an attorney that I returned to the United States early in December."

Chicken Man's Lawyer Asks $17,500 Fee for Divorce

George Hagopian of Wrentham, blind but wealthy 60-year-old poultry farmer, who in May won a divorce from Beatrice Bullukian Hagopian, 43, for cruelty, found his funds tied up today by his attorney, Samuel P. Sears of Boston, who demanded $17,500 as a fee for getting the divorce.

Sears filed an equity suit in Superior Court, setting forth he had collected $2500 and had $15,000 more coming to him.

Judge John E. Swift issued an order of notice returnable July 16 and issued a restraining order temporarily freezing Hagopian's money in five banks.

The order also enjoins Hagopian from drawing upon his assets in Red Bird Farm, inc., his chicken farm.

Hagopian's divorce, which was accompanied by an $80 a week allotment to Mrs. Hagopian, who was given custody of three children, drew considerable attention as the result of testimony by both parties.

He said she and their two small sons once jumped him and took from his pocket a wallet containing $1000. He also testified she lured him into their car after the divorce action was begun, drove to a wooded spot and tried vainly to inveigle him into love-making.

Mrs. Hagopian testified the wallet incident was just a prank, and as for the woods tryst he had been the romantic agressor.

Hub Realtor's Shotgun Death Autopsy Ordered

An autopsy was ordered today in the death of Vincent A. Jenkins, 50, of Tremblett st., Dorchester, a well-known real estate broker, found shot to death in the bedroom of his home.

The victim, clad only in shorts, was discovered by his daughter, June, 8, who a short time before had been sent to the store to buy oranges. A shot gun rested between the victim's legs.

Jenkins, one-time director of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, had been home ill for a week. Police of the Fields Corner station rushed to the house after a telephone call from Mrs. Monica Jenkins, who said, "Come quick. My husband has shot himself."

Medical Examiner Dr. Timothy Leary pronounced the victim dead of a gun shot wound in the head and ordered an autopsy to be performed later today.

The victim's young daughter was the last to see him alive. She had gone to the store and brought him oranges and an hour later had gone to his room to ask for money to buy ice cream.

She ran screaming to her mother and her older brother, Paul, when she found her father lying in a pool of blood.

Jenkins was a mamber of the Twentieth Century Club of Boston, the City Club, a former president of the Lithuanian Chamber of Commerce and the Thorny Lea Golf Club of Brockton.

Curley Writes Wife of Good Medical Care

Mayor Curley, in a letter to his wife from the federal penitentiary at Danbury, Ct., where he is serving a 6 to 18-month term on mail fraud charges, wrote today that he was receiving good medical care and was feeling as well as could be expected.

The letter was delivered to Mrs. Curley at the family's summer home in Scituate, where she has been staying in semi-retirement since his sentence was put into execution.

"It was a beautifully written letter," she said. "t was such a personal letter that I cannot reveal all its contents.

"It was written on two sides of a small sheet of paper. In it he expressed his faith in God and His disdom and advised me not to worry as he is receiving proper medical care."

Meanwhile, as a result of an cilor Perlie Dyer Chase, Back order by Republican City Coun- Bay, who denounced the payment of Curley's salary while he served his sentence as a "dastardly political deal," City Auditor Charles J. Fox requested the city law department today to interpret the legislation under which both Curley and temporary Mayor John B. Hynes are collecting salaries for the post.

Fox said he did not know whether there would be enough money in the budget for the mayor's office to pay both salaries.

City Treasurer Henry F. Brennan said Curley had been paid his regular salary for the period from June 16 to 30 and that his check would be included next week in the bi-monthly payroll unless the law department ruled otherwise.

In filing his order with the Council, yesterday, Chase asserted that it was "common gossip" that a political deal was made for Curley and added:

"Anyone who is willing to deal with Curley is dishonest intellectually. The mayor has his handgrasp on the people on Beacon Hill. There is tremendous criticism throughout the state at the dishonest action of the Republican leadership . . . to allow a man who has been committed to jail to collect salary. We should not be paying salary to a person who is not here to perform his duties."

Fog Balks Mercy Hop To Twins Born at Sea

The Coast Guard air-sea rescue service stood by today for further word from the Army Transport Gen. C. H. Muir, several hundred miles at sea en route from Germany, where the lives of twin babies born prematurely to an Army officer's wife hung in the balance.

Earlier, a 200-pound incubator, supplied by the Massachusetts General Hospital, had been rushed to the Coast Guard Salem air base, where a flying boat was being warmed up for the mercy flight. The incubator had been requested by authorities of the New Yorw Army base, who later cancelled the request.

The General Muir had radioed an urgent request for the incubator to the New York port.

Com John Harding, Coast Guard operations officer here, said the mercy flight would have been made at great risk to the crew of six which mans the giant flying boat.

The vessel was known to be proceeding through a thick fog. The aircraft would have had to take aboard a quantity of gasoline heavy enough to make a sea landing hazardous. There was also a forecast of fog for this afternoon around the coast, said Harding, which might have made it necessary for the plane to head for Bermuda after the rescue operation.

Meanwhile, medical authorities in New York were in constant contact with the vessel, receiving reports of the babies' condition and sending expert advice.

New Crashes Stir Fight on Low Flying

As a naval board of inquiry continued its probe of Sunday's fatal crash of a "Helldiver" plane in North Quincy, and civic leaders demanded that planes from the Squantum Air Bose discontinue flying over Quincy-Milton-Dorchester area, two more plane crashed, one off Woods Hole and the other in a Marion cranberry bog.

The plane which plummeted into the sea off Woods Hole was a Navy scout bomber, piloted by Ens. John L. Hagerman of Olatne, Kansas. Hagerman leaped clear of the wreckage and was picked up by the Coast Guard cutter, General Green.

In the Marion crash, Russell Colonell, 38, of Wareham, was "dusting" cranberry bogs in a Piper Cub plane when a left wing brushed a tree and crashed into a bog. Colonell's condition was reported not serious.

Mayor Charles A. Ross of Quincy today said he had wired the Navy Dept. at Washington, requesting the discontinuance of training flights from the Squantum base.

Joseph B. Grossman, president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, declared he would call a meeting of the chamber directors to protest low-level flying over homes.

State Begins Weaving Web Around Pair in Yacht Killing

By JAMES PADGITT

SANTA ANA, Cal., July 8 (INS)—The prosecution began weaving its web of circumstantial evidence around Heiress Beulah Louise Overell and her college boy sweetheart, George "Bud" Gollum, in Santa Ana today, with the testimony by two Newport Beach mechanics, Richard Hornby and Ted Junkermeier.

Horny and Junkermeier were called after Dr. John B. Hall had completed the final legal technicality—medical testimony—that had remained before the State could begin unfolding its case in the sensational yacht blast deaths.

Dr. Ball, chief autopsy surgeon at the Orange County Hospital, was one of five physicians and pathologists introduced by the prosecution to testify concerning autopsy findings and indications in the deaths of wealthy Walter E. Overell and his wife.

Like the others, he expressed conviction the couple was already dead of head blows when the Overell yacht was sunk with a dynamite time bomb last March 15.

However, Atty. William B. Beirne, for Golum, drew from the physician an admission that his testimony concerning Mrs. Overell atcually was a conclusion, based on earlier testimony by an undertaker taht there was a large blood clot on the woman's head.

It was the second time testimon yby the State's medical experts had been shaken on cross-examination. Earlier Dr. John Montanus admitted he had given erroneous testimony to the grand jury when he said that absence of water in the lungs proved the Overells were dead before the explosion. It deevloped that he had not opened the bodies and did not know whether there was water in the lungs.

The State has sought to prove death prior to the explosion to support its claim that Gollum and the girl bludgeoned the parents to death and then dynamited the yacht to cover the crime.

Hornby and Junkermeier were the mechanics who worked on the boat, the Mary E, the day and evening before the Overells died.

It was Hornby's second trip to the stand. His first testimony was cut short when the defense demanded that the State first establish a basis for the trial—that the Overells were dead by what appeared to be criminal means.

Tito's Purge Chief Revealed As High-Ranking UN Aide

By HOWARD RUSHMORE
Special to the Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, July 8—One of Marshal Tito's most trusted aides who is a veteran Communist and led the persecution of anti-Communists in Yugoslavia, now holds ministerial rank as Security Council delegate in the United Nations, it was learned today.

This Yugoslavian Communist is Joza Vilfan, a lawyer from Slovenia who served as partisan commander under Tito during the war and later became "public prosecutor" when Tito took over the government in Belgrade.

Vilfan, it was learned from official sources in Washington, is regarded as a U. N. minister who has consistently supported any and all Moscow policies, including violent opposition to investigations by U. N. commissions of the Greek border disputes.

From Yugoslavians here who knew Vilfan in his native country, it was learned that the 39-year-old Slovene who came to this country last winter served as Tito's "hatchet man" during the merciless purges of 1945-46.

So severe was the reign of terror that Monsignor Alois Stepinets, archbishop of Zagreb and Catholicism's chief dignitary in Yugoslavia, reported that 169 of his priests had been jailed, 89 were missing and 243 had been killed by Tito's partisans.

Bogdan Raditsa, former minister of information of Yugoslavia who was marked for death by Tito, identified Vilfan as a member of the political bureau of the Yugoslav Communist party—the governing body of the Red Fascist organization.

Raditsa, who is now living here, said Vilfan was "morally responsible" for the deaths or prison sentences given 500,000 Yugoslavians during the past three years.

"Vilfan's presence in the Security Council represents a complete denial of the human rights and freedom for which the United Nations stand," Raditsa declared.

HOT AND COLD

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 8 (AP)—Orchestra leader Charley Spivak's "love cooled as his music grew hotter," his wife, Freda, told advisory master in chancery N. Demarest Campbell in her successful suit for a divorce on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Spivak said they married Dec. 25, 1932 in Chicago and charged he deserted her in July, 1944. She said she is living at Englewood, and her husband is making his home with his parents at New Haven, Ct.

Campbell granted Mrs. Spivak custody of their two children, Joe Allen, 11, and Stephen Glenn, 3, in the interlocutory decree, and permitted her to resume her maiden name of Braveman.

as-much as he delivered papers to her. They said they wanted to talk to everyone that talked with Mrs. Swenson, or saw her. Ralphie had just finished dinner and was helping his mother shuck peas that he had picked earlier from our garden.

"I called on Ralphie and explained that the men wanted him to go along with them. He went along willingly.

"Just before midnight they called me to come to Framingham, which I did. They told me the story—that you already know. I was stunned, I couldn't believe it, I was sick inside, my knees shook. I looked at their faces but they weren't smiling. They looked at me, then looked away to the side.

"Ralphie is a good boy. There must be some mistake.

"I asked if I could see my boy. They led me to another room where Ralphie sat with another man. They left us alone.

"I guess I cried because Ralphie was crying, too.

"I went over to him and put my arms around him. He's almost as tall as me. Comes up to about here (measured to bridge of his nose.)

"I asked him: 'Ralphie, did you do this?'

"He answered, half crying, 'Yes, Dad, I guess I did.'

"I still couldn't believe it. I asked him why—how?

"'I don't know, Dad, everything just went blank. Something happened inside me and I was awfully scared.'

"Ralphie held me tight and we both cried hard. I hugged him telling him everything would be all right. I rubbed his head and shoulders, although I guess I wasn't much help to him. I was dazed and bewildered.

"We both sat down and I asked him to tell me the whole story from start to finish. I told him that his mother and I wanted to help him.

"While his body was shaking with sobs he kept reepating "Honest Dad, I don't know what happened. I don't know why I did it, something just snapped."

"Then the police came in.

"Before they took Ralphie away from me I asked him to pray, to think the whole thing out and to try and remember everything. We all wanted to help him. I told him to remember mother, Caroline, Bobby, Misty and I were with him all the time. (Caroline is his seven-year-old sister, Bobby his five-year-old brother and Misty his black and white terrier dog.) I said we would be over to see him first thing in the morning.

"What more could I tell my boy. I was just as bewildered as he—and still am. His mother is upstairs, prostrate and hysterical, as you can hear."

The victim was found by her daughter, Barbara, 17, who had returned for a visit from her job as councilor of a summer camp. The woman's husband, John H. Swenson, is a Westboro butcher. They had been separated for two years.

As police reconstructed the crime, the victim had lain dead ever since Thursday afternoon. It was at that time that young Ralph called at the Swenson home to collect 41 cents for papers.

It is known that he left and returned later seeking a drink of water. It was then that Mrs. Swenson was struck a blow in the face and strangled as she lay unconscious on the floor.

State Police Pathologist Russell S. Fisher, said the victim died of strangulation, probably through the tightening of a cord around her neck. He said no manual pressure had been used. The victim, who was clad in shorts, a halter, bobby sox and shoes, was not criminally attacked. Her clothing was not disarranged and nothing had been taken from the house.

The accused boy is an honor student at Lincoln Junior High School in Framingham and was particularly good in history and geography. He was anxious to join the Navy and wanted to enter Annapolis some day. Books on Navy warfare lay still opened on the Duchaceck family table, where the boy had been studying when State Police called for him.

The boy's father said that he did not notice any strange actions on the part of his son since Thursday, the day of the murder. He said that Ralph had helped him in the garden Thursday night and stayed home Friday celebrating the Fourth. He added that the boy had helped him work on their boat at a nearby lake on Saturday and Sunday and that on Monday he was back at work in the garden again.

Greek Aid Seen Barrier to Reds

OMAHA, July 8 (INS) Dwight Griswold, head of the $350,000,000 Greek aid mission, asserted that Greece was important to the maintenance of peace because it will prevent a "Communist flanking movement" in Europe.

Griswold, former governor of Nebraska, departed for Washington, after a three-day visit at his home in Lincoln. But before his departure, he declared Greece itself is not important in the U. S. program to prevent the spread of Communism in Europe "except for its strategic position."

Griswold said that the names of 12 or 15 persons who will assist in the Greek program will be announced in Washington Wednesday or Thursday.

Postwar leader in motor car style

ONE look tells you why this postwar Studebaker gets more attention than any other 1947 automobile. It's the first really different car in years.

But there's much more to this low-swung, roomy Studebaker than its distinctive styling. Owners say it's just as marvelous in performance, riding comfort and handling ease as it is in looks.

It's a dream car, too, in original postwar features. "Black light" dash dials that don't glare! Wide-vision windshield and windows! Self-adjusting safety brakes!

Landlords Warned by OPA

Scores of complaints from tenants declaring that their landlords had increased rents without notice, today brought a sharp warning from OPA officials that court injunctions will be sought against landlords violating the provisions of the 1947 Housing and Rent Act.

The act permits 15 per cent increases through mutual agreement between landlord and tenant, accompanied by a lease through 1948, officials pointed out.

William F. Reilly, rent control director for eastern Massachusetts, also warned that landlords can take no action against tenants who decline to pay increased rent in return for a lease. He warned that no increase above 15 per cent is allowed with or without a lease.

Q—Why is pressure cooking considered better than the old method?

A—Food cooked in the pressure cooker retains most of the mineral and vitamin value which is lost because these minerals are carried away in the liquid that is usually thrown away.

Q—If sawdust is used around tomato plants as a mulch, must it be cleaned off before spading the garden in the spring?

A—An ordinary layer of sawdust can be worked into the soil in the fall. To prevent the soil from becoming too acid, I would suggest applying about 2 pounds of limestone per 100 sq. ft.

Q—We have a large elm that has several dead branches. Could this be the Dutch Elm disease?

A—Could be. Better report this condition to a tree specialist and have it looked at. If diseased, the tree had better come down.

Q—Is it possible to raise some plants now on spare land that can be used as a mulch for strawberries?

A—If you have land that is idle, it is possible to raise millet or buckwheat which should be cut and dried before it produces seed.

Flying Saucer

"Scram, Mac. But take along some beer. You're going on a long ride."

Then I found myself lifted and tossed sprawling. There was the sound of a door closing and a sense of lifting rapidly into space.

I scrambled to my feet and looked out the window—its infra-invisible paint is only invisible when you look at it from the outside. Manhattan was falling away beneath us like a toy town.

"Well, how do you like your first ride in a flying saucer, Orson Welles?" leered the green man. "You're on the way to a place where there are more Martians than there ever were in New Jersey."

"Look, this may be a flying saucer," I complained, "but I'm not Orson Welles. I got this high forehead from wearing a tight hat."

"Then who are you?"

"I'm his cousin, Artesian Welles," I countered, "and who or what are you?"

"I'm Balmiston x-Ray O'Rune from Mars," said the green man, "and you have probably ruined my chance to win the sweepstakes."

"What sweepstakes?"

"Why the 60,000 centennial running of the Universal Martian Treasure Hunt Sweepstakes!" crossly grunted the green man. "This time there are 500 space ships competing. To win I have to bring back 12 rare objects, including Orson Welles. Now somebody will beat me. It's all your fault for looking like somebody else."

Moodily he tossed some peanuts on top of his head. To my mild surprise it opened and a double row of teeth chomped down on the peanuts.

Now I knew where his voice had been coming from.

"What are the other items on your treasure hunt list?" I asked.

"Oh, I've already got a slice of moon cheese, a burning spark from the sun, the fingerprint of Mother Machree, a phonograph record of Gargantua singing 'Mammy,' and an autographed smoke ring from Winston Churchill's cigar," said the green man.

"I've just got a few things left to do in this country—like buying a new motor car, getting a nickel beer and a good five-cent cigar, and plucking a hair from the eyebrow of John L. Lewis."

"Balmiston, old boy," I said, "I think you and the other flying saucers are going to be here a long time. Your search is only beginning."

So here I am wheeling this blasted flying saucer back and forth between the Bronx, Santa Fe and Seattle. I have scribbled down this story and twice tried to smuggle it out in a bottle through the gravity exhaust tube. But each time the green man woke up and caught me.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, TUESDAY, JULY 8, 1947

THE TAX CUT REVIVAL

THERE HAS BEEN a strong revival of the movement in Congress to give the American people substantial relief from excessive Federal taxes, although a bill previously passed for that purpose was vetoed by the President and the veto was sustained.

It is pretty clear that if the motion to override the tax cut veto should be put in the House of Representatives today it would have many more than the two votes it lacked on June 17.

And in the Senate enough Democratic opponents of the original measure have indicated a change of mind to suggest that the veto could now be overridden even there.

The best appraisal of this changed situation is offered by Senator Byrd of Virginia, who opposed the original measure principally because of the uncertainty then prevailing—and still prevailing—about appropriations and expenditures.

"Assuming Congress obeys the legislative reorganization law and establishes a CEILING ON EXPENDITURES," says Senator Byrd, "I would be inclined to vote for tax reduction effective January 1, 1948.

"I feel certain that if the Republican party establishes a ceiling on expenditures and continues to REDUCE expenditures, a tax reduction effective January 1 can be enacted by Congress even though vetoed by the President—which I do not believe will occur."

MOREOVER, as Senator Byrd suggests, the moving up of the effective date of tax reduction from July 1 of this year to January 1 of next year—the only material difference between the vetoed bill and the revised measure now so strongly supported—cancels out the objections of those who wanted debt reduction over tax reduction.

Continuance of the existing revenue imposts another half year, the Virginia Senator observes, will yield at least TWO BILLION DOLLARS of additional Federal income, and—

"This, together with the reductions in appropriations bills now being effected, makes certain, in my judgment, a DEBT PAYMENT AFTER TAX REDUCTION in the next fiscal year of not less than the two and six-tenths billion dollars provided in the Senate resolution."

The Congress, which failed so narrowly of its objective in its first attempt to provide tax relief to the American people, seems now to be presented with a remarkable opportunity to attain that desirable objective—and this time as a non-partisan AMERICAN objective, and with Republicans and Democrats alike attentive to national interests.

WE MUST BE STRONG

THE board of directors of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs has added the Federation's name to the growing list of important organizations endorsing peacetime universal military training for the United States.

It is a frightening thing, as these women realize, for any nation to be weak in a world constantly and increasingly menaced by aggression.

And that is the condition of the world today.

America must lose no time in correcting its admittedly grave and potentially fatal weakness.

The penalty for any such loss of vital time is not merely prolongation of our national danger period, but the remaining in force of an open INVITATION TO ATTACK by any aggressor nation contemplating ultimate war against America.

The universal military training program has already languished much too long for our country's safety.

The longer it languishes the greater our national danger will be.

HAVE MADE TWO recent additions to my singing in the shower program. One is that touching ballad titled "The Brooklyn Theayter Is Boiming" and the other, which is sung to the tune of "Pop Goes the Weasel" is as follows:

Everyone has political views
And everybody backs his,
But whether you win or whether you lose
Up goes the taxes!

PLEASE NOTE: Am asked if there has ever been a thoroughbred race mare named Mother-in-Law. Don't recall any. I'll ask Clem McCarthy. Tried to get him on the phone yesterday but his wife said he was at the club playing table tennis with J. Fred Coots, the song writer. I have never seen Mr. McCarthy playing table tennis. That should be an interesting spectacle.

OVER THERE: What is the record for the longest picketing of a store? It may soon be broken in the town of Dun Loaghaire, Ireland. Pickets have been parading in front of Jim Downey's bar in that town for eight years and the end is not in sight. Mr. Downey has become so accustomed to seeing the pickets parade, that if they are late in arriving in the morning he calls up the union and asks what is the trouble.

ASKING QUERIES from clients: Q—From you I learned Pysht was the name of a town in the State of Washington. Now please tell me this: What is a swoose? A—A swoose is a cross between a swan and a goose. Q—How about the handling of a Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) husband? A—The Sagittarian males are "married bachelor" types. Very difficult to break into matrimonial harness. Want to go out at least three nights a week with the boys. Inclined to often give a thought to old sweethearts. Their wives must strive desperately to make them love their homes more than their liberty. They like children. A Sagittarian with a cheerful wife, who is a good cook, three children and a springer Spaniel is not so hard to manage as other men born under his sign.

TOO MUCH SCOTCH: Recently 2,500,000 bottles of Scotch whisky arrived in New York from Scotland in one week. The Scots better start making a study of the New York city market. There is too much Scotch on the shelves in that city already. Scotch is selling at lower prices than rye and bourbon.

SPEEDING: Elliott Roosevelt was recently fined $50 for speeding along the Sawmill River highway, New York. It was his second offense. And so what happened? Roosevelt wasn't even put to the trouble to come to court. A representative of his appeared and paid the $50. Penalties enforced like that will not do the very bad traffic situation any good.

BLESSED EVENTS: Australian brides of GI Joes now residing in this country, say the cost of having a baby is much higher in the U. S. A. than in Australia. There are flat price propositions made for weddings but I never have seen such an offer made for a blessed event. Some enterprising organization should figure out a one price blessed event proposition covering all expenses incidental to same and then sell it on the installment plan.

HORSES & WOMEN: Women rarely pay the bets they make with men, but are very persistent when it comes to collecting wagers with males. That's what a captious critic of the female sex states. There is a certain type of female of which this can properly be said. But the majority of women are very good at paying off wagers. At least, that has been my experience. My only objection to wagering with the ladies is they usually want odds. For instance, feminine subscribers will write to this department saying: "I'll bet you a stogie against a pair of nylons." I figure that is asking odds of about 25 to 1.

LOW SCORE: As for that Californian who thougnt his wife's score of 13 in a regulation bowling match was the all time low, Brooklyn has been heard from. A resident of the beautiful borough across the bridge says at Freddie Fitzsimmon's alleys in Sheepshead Bay a woman bowler had a score of five.

ASIDES: Gasoline is 40 cents a gallon in England. The highest price I ever paid for gasoline in the U. S. A. was 34 cents per gallon, the lowest 12 cents. How about you?

NEW YORK, July 8—The Pattern Makers' League, a small union of the A. F. of L., has challenged that part of the new labor-relations law which forbids unions to spend their money for campaign literature and other political propaganda.

Westbrook Pegler

Apparently there is a scramble afoot among the boss unioneers to achieve a painless martyrdom in defense of the "freedom of the press." The assumption is that this part of the law will be condemned on constitutional grounds by the Supreme Court or that even if it should be upheld, the punishment would be glorious and luxurious. The announcement of this defiance is political propaganda, published in the July issue of the Pattern Makers' Journal, and the cost of the Journal is paid by the members through their dues.

This is a very good union, as unions go, composed of aristocrats of a skilled trade and conducted generally in their interests rather than for the sole personal benefit of any boss. For their money, the men could hire a better writer than the author of the challenge which resounds with the dull, dumb clangor of a rusty bucket and completely fails to state the issue.

AS TO THE ISSUE, let us see.

Does this law impair the freedom of the press in forbidding union publications, supported out of the members' dues, to publish campaign literature or support candidates? It is a borderline case but decision in such cases can't straddle the border. I say freedom of the press is not involved.

The forbiddance is against the use of certain money for certain purposes. The union has a right to pass resolutions and support candidates in print provided that such publication is not supported by the dues and other treasury funds exacted from the members. The union may lend its name to a publication which is financed by voluntary stock investors, and therefore have a voice in print, if it wants one.

We have a parallel verboten in the income tax law which provides that the income of immune institutions, including religious organizations, shall be exempt provided that none of it is used for the purpose of influencing legislation. If you concede the political hygiene and justice of the income tax at all, you can find no constitutional fault with this provision. We don't have to give a church or educational institution any exemption. This exemption is a special privilege and its terms have been violated defiantly by men of the cloth and political fakers who run espionage rackets in the guise of educational concerns. Several years ago I pointed out a case to Henry Morgenthau in which a clergyman, whose authority covered a large number of churches, had interfered in a strictly political issue and asked him what he intended to do about it. Henry said he wasn't going to do anything. He wasn't going to pick any trouble with any church, guilty or not. That is just what he said and, of course, that was a corruption of government because he admitted that there had been a flagrant violation.

I MENTION THIS because the Pattern Makers' League gets heroic in defense of religious freedom, too when it says "some resentment was expressed by the politicians on Capitol Hill because religious leaders voiced opinions of the Taft-Hartley bill."

I think the Pattern Makers' Journal has got that a little wrong. These politicians, or statesmen, did not resent the expression of these religious leaders, although some individual members of one religious group certainly were sore as the devil at being told what to think. These politicians, or statesmen, merely pointed out that these religious leaders had forfeited the tax immunity which the law grants to their congregations under certain definite restrictions which these clergymen thoroughly understood. I do not dispute their right to interfere in politics. But they should be the last to evade or disobey the law and should pay their taxes now without argument. The tax is the price they are supposed to pay for the privilege of political activity.

The Pattern Makers' Journal asks whether religious communities are to be muzzled next? There you have an example of the sort of thing that Congress had in mind in deciding to forbid the financial support of publications through union dues. They are notoriously devious in their misrepresentation of issues to their members, consistently in the interest of the bosses who run the unions and edit the papers. There has not been the vaguest suggestion that any clergyman be muzzled. All that has been proposed is that religious organizations with enormous incomes be compelled to obey the law and pay their income taxes like all the rest of us, including the irreligious and the atheists, when they violate the clause which qualifies their immunity.

HOLLYWOOD, JULY 8—I almost thought Anne Baxter was lost, strayed or stolen. She's been out of the picture, or should I say "pictures" ever since winning the Oscar for the best femme supporting performance in "Razor's Edge."

But, Academy Award winners aren't to be cast about lightly, so Darryl Zanuck has been waiting for just the right thing for her. Anne will co-star with Dana Andrews in "Spoonhandle," the Ruth Moore best seller about a young couple who live on a lobster fishing island and who fell in love when they adopt a small boy.

By the time you read this Henry King, the director, will already be on his way to Cape Cod to film the atmosphere right in its own territory. More and more, 20th is going in for actual backgrounds—they started the idea—and it's a good one.

THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY of the birth of John Paul Jones, one of our greatest naval heroes which was celebrated last Sunday, reveals an interesting fact. The Bon Homme Richard, John Paul's boat, was originally named Douras after the family of Marion Davies, whose real name is Marion Douras.

The Douras family has figured for generations in the history of France. Sometime ago Marion received a letter from Victor Hugo Douras, a cousin who was secretary of the French embassy in Washington. He said that the Douras chateau in Bordeaux, built by the Duke of Douras, was unoccupied. He told Marion that if she claimed it and restored it she would be entitled to the title that went with the castle.

But, being 100 per cent American, Marion never did anything about it. She is not interested in the title, but when she goes to Europe again she will look up the history of her family and will pay a visit to the Douras chateau.

THERE ISN'T A LITTLE GIRL nine years old who wouldn't envy Luana Patten today if they could see the dressing room Walt Disney arranged for her as a present for her ninth birthday. There are Disney characters all over the wall, and it's arranged exactly like a doll's house.

In Luana's last picture, "Fun and Fancy Free," Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen's Charlie, that is, is her boy friend—and you can be sure there are pictures of Charlie in the new dressing room, which is the most unique one, I venture to say, in all Hollywood, or anywhere else.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: I want to say right out loud here in print that Lana Turner has been keeping her word to the letter, that she's turned over a new leaf. She's been conspicious by her absence at most of the night spots. She is sincerely in love with Tyrone Power, and he, apparently, is just as much in love with her. They did go stepping one evening and danced together for the first time.

When Lana told me this was it, I wasn't sure she knew her own mind. But now I'm convinced this is on the up and up. She's lost pounds, too, and has her old blonde hair. She has never looked as well.

IT'S A SENTIMENTAL journey Andrea King is making to Paris this fall, as well as a movie job. She'll co-star with Victor Francien in "The Life of Rubens" but there is a human interest story back of her decision to go traveling.

Andrea was born in France four months before her father was killed while serving in the Lafayette Escadrille during World War I. She has never even seen a photograph of him.

Now she plans to look up members of the Escadrille in the hope that some one of them may have group photographs in which her father appears.

WITH ITALY SHAKING in her boots and with the Italians depressed over being "in for it" no matter which way the wind blows in the international squeeze,—it seems funny to talk about Italian picture making.

Still they made the magnificent "The Open City" right while war was raging, and now Charles Korvin leaves for Rome this winter to star in "Journey Out of Chaos." Victor Stoloff is making it with English and French actors.

Korvin, by the way, just had the cast removed from his leg after breaking it weeks ago in a skiing accident and is on his way to Germany with the "Berlin Express" company.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random:

Want a laugh? The King brothers deny they will do the life of "Bugsy" Siegel. Whoever said they would?

Vic Orsatti walked into the Mocambo with Ann Miller on his arm and ran smack into his ex, Marie McDonald, who was, of course, with Harry Karl. They all got together for a drink. Well, Vic still represents Marie.

Betty Avery Brown, who didn't stay in Europe very long, at Ciro's with Tony Martin. Also glimpsed in a ringside seat were Rory Calhoun and Faith Domerque. I always call her Faith Dorn.

Noel Coward is interested in acquiring the film rights to "Mr. Smith Came From London." It's the autobiography of Sir Aubrey Smith.

Mary and Madline Foy, Charley's two sisters, opened in his supper club over the week-end. They are doing the same act they did 33 years ago when they were part of the "The Seven Little Foys" in vaudeville.

Marcus Goodrich is writing a story about his wife, Olivia de Havilland, for Photoplay Magazine. He's been working on the piece for weeks. He says he's the slowest writer in America. Good thing he doesn't write a column.

Vic Mature, who has lived in more barns and out of the way places than any actor in Hollywood, now has a swimming pool, of all things. It's so big there isn't room for anything else in his yard.

Joyce Reynolds will spend her vacation in Honolulu at the end of the month. Many people who don't want to go to Europe this year are heading in that direction.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

THANKS to that Stockholm decision by a board of three boxing judges which declared Olle Tandberg of Sweden the winner over Joe Baksi of Pennsylvania, Boston may be saved some slurs in the future . . . Along Jacob's Beach and other boxing centers, when a referee or a board of judges has rendered an unfair decision favoring the hometown boy in the bout, such a verdict has come to be known as a "Boston decision" . . . Jack "Doc" Kearns, manager of Dempsey when Jack was champion, is blamed for originating the expression . . . Henceforth, such a decision is likely to be translated in prize-fight parlance as "something from the Scandinavian."

But Boston voters should not disregard this column's warning of March that the Republican objective is a commission-form of government for Boston . . . From Washington (but not from any source connected with Mr. Nunan or his office) comes word to this department that the Boston area thus far has amazed Washington officialdom by its apparent purity in the matter of income tax violations Except for a group of cases emanating north of Boston known as the "fishing cases" and concerning a few alleged violators among the captains who go down to the sea in ships, Boston has provided hardly any grist for the mill of the Department of Justice, and on June 1 onl two cases of alleged violation had reached the D. of J. trial docket. The Treasury Department has first disposition of tax litigation, with the Justice Department trying the difficult criminal cases . . . "The Flying Saucers" was registered by RKO with the Johnson Office as a title for a picture almost as soon as first reports of the disc-concerting missiles and their 1500-miles an hour speed were turned in . . . Although routine stories told of the flood of homecoming traffic late Sunday night, the fact seems to be that the traffic streams were thinner than in any recent year . . . So, too, with the "rush from the city" the day before the Fourth. The holiday this year started early last week, and traffic out of town reached its peak on Monday and Tuesday. And the home-comers delayed their departure from beaches, country and mountains until Monday . . . Joe Venuti's restaurant makes a creation of iced-coffee. It tastes like coffee and not something to paddle in with a long spoon . . . WASHINGTON, July 8—Senator John W. Bricker, of Ohio, one of the potentially dusky equines for the presidency, is afraid he may have been taken for a two-way ride—literally and figuratively.

The tall and distinguished ex-governor, who tried for the vice-presidency last time, only to discover that 1944 wasn't a Republican year, got into a taxi at the Capitol with a bevy of newspapermen. This is not sound policy to begin with because reporters have a trick—acquired from long experience in expense account swindling—of packing into a cab en masse.

In fact—and I am divulging no great trade secret—it was from watching sportswriters arrive at a ballpark, all carrying portable typewriters, that the circus got the idea for the big laugh stunt in which 30 clowns clamber from a pint-sized auto.

Sen. Bricker found himself wedged in a corner, like a presidential adviser at a White House press conference—and if you don't get the latter allusion it is only because the good Lord, in His infinite mercy, has spared you from having to cover the things. Anyway, the Senator was good and crowded.

The taxi driver, as is mostly the case here in Washington, turned out to be a political pundit. Continually turning around so as to be a thoroughgoing menace to traffic and also life and limb, he surveyed his passengers and proceeded to bring them up to date on the state of the union.

"This man Truman," he teed off, "should have signed the tax bill. It'd of done him a lot of good politically."

"Then you think," suggested Senator Bricker, "that Truman is through?"

"I do," replied the 30-cents-a-zone jockey. "Next year it will be all Republican."

"That so?" asked a reporter, who has spent a lifetime trying to stir up contention. "Who should the Republicans put up for the presidency?"

The hackie swiveled to survey his charges once more, narrowly escaping collision with a bus marked "Charter," and said he was all for Senator Taft.

"Taft is the man for President," he orated. "He's the kind of guy you can rely on." Addressing Senator Bricker directly, he added: "Don't you agree with me, mister?"

"Well—yes—" replied the senator, ignoring the grins of the reporters. "Senator Taft is a very fine man."

The hackie faced ahead long enough to negotiate a sharp turn between two trucks. Behind his back the reporters tried to stifle their chuckles. Senator Bricker was grinning too—but it faded when the jockey swiveled again and said:

"I know who you are, too!"

"You do?" gasped the solon, taken aback. "Who am I?"

"Why," replied the driver, deadpannedly, "You are the other gentleman from Ohio who wants to take the nomination away from Senator Taft!"

I HAD OCCASION to speak very sternly the other day about sleeping under blankets in the summertime.

It is my firm conviction that people who rant about sleeping under blankets this season fall into two categories; either they are downright eccentric, or they are trying to drive others berserk. What's the use of having summertime if you can't undrape a little?

I bring the subject up once more because of Mr. and Mrs. George Abell who are honeymooning at Sea Island, Ga. I am rather surprised at Mrs. Abell being a party to it because she is a lady of sound political background, having been, until recently, the wife of John D. M. Hamilton, who managed the presidential campaign of Alf Landon. I am convinced it is without foundation but several catty dames have suggested she divorced Hamilton because she just found out that Landon didn't win.

In any event, I have just received this wire:

"Wish you were here. Sleeping under blankets.

"George and June Abel."

Wouldn't you think newlyweds could find something more interesting to do than driving me nuts?

THE TAX CUT REVIVAL

THERE HAS BEEN a strong revival of the movement in Congress to give the American people substantial relief from excessive Federal taxes, although a bill previously passed for that purpose was vetoed by the President and the veto was sustained.

It is pretty clear that if the motion to override the tax cut veto should be put in the House of Representatives today it would have many more than the two votes it lacked on June 17.

And in the Senate enough Democratic opponents of the original measure have indicated a change of mind to suggest that the veto could now be overridden even there.

The best appraisal of this changed situation is offered by Senator Byrd of Virginia, who opposed the original measure principally because of the uncertainty then prevailing—and still prevailing—about appropriations and expenditures.

"Assuming Congress obeys the legislative reorganization law and establishes a CEILING ON EXPENDITURES," says Senator Byrd, "I would be inclined to vote for tax reduction effective January 1, 1948.

"I feel certain that if the Republican party establishes a ceiling on expenditures and continues to REDUCE expenditures, a tax reduction effective January 1 can be enacted by Congress even though vetoed by the President—which I do not believe will occur."

MOREOVER, as Senator Byrd suggests, the moving up of the effective date of tax reduction from July 1 of this year to January 1 of next year—the only material difference between the vetoed bill and the revised measure now so strongly supported—cancels out the objections of those who wanted debt reduction over tax reduction.

Continuance of the existing revenue imposts another half year, the Virginia Senator observes, will yield at least TWO BILLION DOLLARS of additional Federal income, and—

"This, together with the reductions in appropriations bills now being effected, makes certain, in my judgment, a DEBT PAYMENT AFTER TAX REDUCTION in the next fiscal year of not less than the two and six-tenths billion dollars provided in the Senate resolution."

The Congress, which failed so narrowly of its objective in its first attempt to provide tax relief to the American people, seems now to be presented with a remarkable opportunity to attain that desirable objective—and this time as a non-partisan AMERICAN objective, and with Republicans and Democrats alike attentive to national interests.

WE MUST BE STRONG

THE board of directors of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs has added the Federation's name to the growing list of important organizations endorsing peacetime universal military training for the United States.

It is a frightening thing, as these women realize, for any nation to be weak in a world constantly and increasingly menaced by aggression.

And that is the condition of the world today.

America must lose no time in correcting its admittedly grave and potentially fatal weakness.

The penalty for any such loss of vital time is not merely prolongation of our national danger period, but the remaining in force of an open INVITATION TO ATTACK by any aggressor nation contemplating ultimate war against America.

The universal military training program has already languished much too long for our country's safety.

The longer it languishes the greater our national danger will be.

It is time that our Senators and Representatives faced realities.

It is also time their constituents made it clear that the country expects them to do so.

We don't have to give a church or educational institution any exemption. This exemption is a special privilege and its terms have been violated defiantly by men of the cloth and political fakers who run espionage rackets in the guise of educational concerns. Several years ago I pointed out a case to Henry Morgenthau in which a clergyman, whose authority covered a large number of churches, had interfered in a strictly political issue and asked him what he intended to do about it. Henry said he wasn't going to do anything. He wasn't going to pick any trouble with any church, guilty or not. That is just what he said and, of course, that was a corruption of government because he admitted that there had been a flagrant violation.

I MENTION THIS because the Pattern Makers' League gets heroic in defense of religious freedom, too when it says "some resentment was expressed by the politicians on Capitol Hill because religious leaders voiced opinions of the Taft-Hartley bill."

I think the Pattern Makers' Journal has got that a little wrong. These politicians, or statesmen, did not resent the expression of these religious leaders, although some individual members of one religious group certainly were sore as the devil at being told what to think. These politicians, or statesmen, merely pointed out that these religious leaders had forfeited the tax immunity which the law grants to their congregations under certain definite restrictions which these clergymen thoroughly understood. I do not dispute their right to interfere in politics. But they should be the last to evade or disobey the law and should pay their taxes now without argument. The tax is the price they are supposed to pay for the privilege of political activity.

The Pattern Makers' Journal asks whether religious communities are to be muzzled next? There you have an example of the sort of thing that Congress had in mind in deciding to forbid the financial support of publications through union dues. They are notoriously devious in their misrepresentation of issues to their members, consistently in the interest of the bosses who run the unions and edit the papers. There has not been the vaguest suggestion that any clergyman be muzzled. All that has been proposed is that religious organizations with enormous incomes be compelled to obey the law and pay their income taxes like all the rest of us, including the irreligious and the atheists, when they violate the clause which qualifies their immunity.

Hollywood

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, JULY 8—I almost thought Anne Baxter was lost, strayed or stolen. She's been out of the picture, or should I say "pictures" ever since winning the Oscar for the best femme supporting performance in "Razor's Edge."

But, Academy Award winners aren't to be cast about lightly, so Darryl Zanuck has been waiting for just the right thing for her. Anne will co-star with Dana Andrews in "Spoonhandle," the Ruth Moore best seller about a young couple who live on a lobster fishing island and who fell in love when they adopt a small boy.

By the time you read this Henry King, the director, will already be on his way to Cape Cod to film the atmosphere right in its own territory. More and more, 20th is going in for actual backgrounds—they started the idea—and it's a good one.

THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY of the birth of John Paul Jones, one of our greatest naval heroes which was celebrated last Sunday, reveals an interesting fact. The Bon Homme Richard, John Paul's boat, was originally named Douras after the family of Marion Davies, whose real name is Marion Douras.

The Douras family has figured for generations in the history of France. Sometime ago Marion received a letter from Victor Hugo Douras, a cousin who was secretary of the French embassy in Washington. He said that the Douras chateau in Bordeaux, built by the Duke of Douras, was unoccupied. He told Marion that if she claimed it and restored it she would be entitled to the title that went with the castle.

But, being 100 per cent American, Marion never did anything about it. She is not interested in the title, but when she goes to Europe again she will look up the history of her family and will pay a visit to the Douras chateau.

THERE ISN'T A LITTLE GIRL nine years old who wouldn't envy Luana Patten today if they could see the dressing room Walt Disney arranged for her as a present for her ninth birthday. There are Disney characters all over the wall, and it's arranged exactly like a doll's house.

In Luana's last picture, "Fun and Fancy Free," Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen's Charlie, that is, is her boy friend—and you can be sure there are pictures of Charlie in the new dressing room, which is the most unique one, I venture to say, in all Hollywood, or anywhere else.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: I want to say right out loud here in print that Lana Turner has been keeping her word to the letter, that she's turned over a new leaf. She's been conspicuous by her absence at most of the night spots. She is sincerely in love with Tyrone Power, and he, apparently, is just as much in love with her. They did go stepping one evening and danced together for the first time.

When Lana told me this was it, I wasn't sure she knew her own mind. But now I'm convinced this is on the up and up. She's lost pounds, too, and has her old blonde hair. She has never looked as well.

IT'S A SENTIMENTAL journey Andrea King is making to Paris this fall, as well as a movie job. She'll co-star with Victor Francien in "The Life of Rubens" but there is a human interest story back of her decision to go traveling.

Andrea was born in France four months before her father was killed while serving in the Lafayette Escadrille during World War I. She has never even seen a photograph of him.

Now she plans to look up members of the Escadrille in the hope that some one of them may have group photographs in which her father appears.

WITH ITALY SHAKING in her boots and with the Italians depressed over being "in for it" no matter which way the wind blows in the international squeeze,—it seems funny to talk about Italian picture making.

Still they made the magnificent "The Open City" right while war was raging, and now Charles Korvin leaves for Rome this winter to star in "Journey Out of Chaos." Victor Stoloff is making it with English and French actors.

Korvin, by the way, just had the cast removed from his leg after breaking it weeks ago in a skiing accident and is on his way to Germany with the "Berlin Express" company.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Jack Carson and his estranged wife, Kay Germaine, had the golfers at Lakeside agog. Yes, they were together, but I'm sorry, it's not a reconciliation.

Vic Orsatti walked into the Mocambo with Ann Miller on his arm and ran smack into his ex, Marie McDonald, who was, of course, with Harry Karl. They all got together for a drink. Well, Vic still represents Marie.

Betty Avery Brown, who didn't stay in Europe very long, at Ciro's with Tony Martin. Also glimpsed in a ringside seat were Rory Calhoun and Faith Domerque. I always call her Faith Dorn.

Noel Coward is interested in acquiring the film rights to "Mr. Smith Came From London." It's the autobiography of Sir Aubrey Smith.

Mary and Madline Foy, Charley's two sisters, opened in his supper club over the week-end. They are doing the same act they did 33 years ago when they were part of the "The Seven Little Foys" in vaudeville.

Marcus Goodrich is writing a story about his wife, Oliva de Havilland, for Photoplay Magazine. He's been working on the piece for weeks. He says he's the slowest writer in America. Good thing he doesn't write a column.

Vic Mature, who has lived in more barns and out of the way places than any actor in Hollywood, now has a swimming pool, of all things. It's so big there isn't room for anything else in his yard.

Joyce Reynolds will spend her vacation in Honolulu at the end of the month. Many people who don't want to go to Europe this year are heading in that direction.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

THANKS to that Stockholm decision by a board of three boxing judges which declared Olle Tandberg of Sweden the winner over Joe Baksi of Pennsylvania, Boston may be saved some slurs in the future . . . Along Jacob's Beach and other boxing centers, when a referee or a board of judges has rendered an unfair decision fovoring the hometown boy in the bout, such a verdict has come to be known as a "Boston decision" . . . Jack "Doc" Kearns, manager of Dempsey when Jack was champion, is blamed for originating the expression . . . Henceforth, such a decision is likely to be translated in prize-fight parlance as "something from the Scandinavian."

WASHINGTON, July 8—Senator John W. Bricker, of Ohio, one of the potentially dusky equines for the presidency, is afraid he may have been taken for a two-way ride—literally and figuratively.

The tall and distinguished ex-governor, who tried for the vice-presidency last time, only to discover that 1944 wasn't a Republican year, got into a taxi at the Capitol with a bevy of newspapermen. This is not sound policy to begin with because reporters have a trick—acquired from long experience in expense account swindling—of packing into a cab en masse.

In fact—and I am divulging no great trade secret—it was from watching sportswriters arrive at a ballpark, all carrying portable typewriters, that the circus got the idea for the big laugh stunt in which 30 clowns clamber from a pint-sized auto.

Sen. Bricker found himself wedged in a corner, like a presidential adviser at a White House press conference—and if you don't get the latter allusion it is only because the good Lord, in His infinite mercy, has spared you from having to cover the things. Anyway, the Senator was good and crowded.

The taxi driver, as is mostly the case here in Washington, turned out to be a political pundit. Continually turning around so as to be a thoroughgoing menace to traffic and also life and limb, he surveyed his passengers and proceeded to bring them up to date on the state of the union.

"This man Truman," he teed off, "should have signed the tax bill. It'd of done him a lot of good politically."

"Then you think," suggested Senator Bricker, "that Truman is through?"

"I do," replied the 30-cents-a-zone jockey. "Next year it will be all Republican."

"That so?" asked a reporter, who has spent a lifetime trying to stir up contention. "Who should the Republicans put up for the presidency?"

The hackie swiveled to survey his charges once more, narrowly escaping collision with a bus marked "Charter," and said he was all for Senator Taft.

"Taft is the man for President," he orated. "He's the kind of guy you can rely on." Addressing Senator Bricker directly, he added: "Don't you agree with me, mister?"

"Well—yes—" replied the senator, ignoring the grins of the reporters. "Senator Taft is a very fine man."

The hackie faced ahead long enough to negotiate a sharp turn between two trucks. Behind his back the reporters tried to stifle their chuckles. Senator Bricker was grinning too—but it faded when the jockey swiveled again and said:

"I know who you are, too!"

"You do?" gasped the solon, taken aback. "Who am I?"

"Why," replied the driver, deadpannedly, "You are the other gentleman from Ohio who wants to take the nomination away from Senator Taft!"

I HAD OCCASION to speak very sternly the other day about sleeping under blankets in the summertime.

It is my firm conviction that people who rant about sleeping under blankets this season fall into two categories; either they are downright eccentric, or they are trying to drive others berserk. What's the use of having summertime if you can't undrape a little?

"I don't think they'll have any horses left to bet on by the time we get to the window!"

I bring the subject up once more because of Mr. and Mrs. George Abell who are honeymooning at Sea Island, Ga. I am rather surprised at Mrs. Abell being a party to it because she is a lady of sound political background, having been, until recently, the wife of John D. M. Hamilton, who managed the presidential campaign of Alf Landon. I am convinced it is without foundation but several catty dames have suggested she divorced Hamilton because she just found out that Landon didn't win.

In any event, I have just received this wire:

"Wish you were here. Sleeping under blankets.

"George and June Abel."

Wouldn't you think newlyweds could find something more interesting to do than driving me nuts?

Two Good Things for the Eyes

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

SUMMER OR WINTER . . . it is wise to use a little beauty caution. There's actually no relaxing from a beauty routine for the girl who takes her facial security seriously. We may snitch a litttle here and a little there . . . but whom are we kidding? You can't buy beauty like a dress . . . it is something a gal works for.

Sure the sunshine and fresh air are wonderful for the health . . . although recently we read a treatise in which sunning for health was held to be a debatable and fallacious premise . . . but while you are supposedly soaking up all those vitamins . . . it is particularly important to remember the disadvantages of the sun and breeze. For the sun can be your undoing as well

It does burn and it does dry the facial pelt . . . especially the delicate eye area which can't stand the wringer-process of the sun. A hundred times a day you squint and frown . . . and before you know it . . . unattractive little lines and wrinkles have formed around your eyes. They may lend character and that interesting, though weather-beaten expression to a mariner's face . . . but they certainly don't add anything but age to a woman's looks.

Or do you want to look like "Tugboat Annie" of fiction fame . . . that rugged, salty, feminist who is a match, according to the stories, for any sea-going captain.

Before it is beyond repair . . . avoid or remedy this unbecoming damage to your eyes caused by the sun by fingerprinting a perfectly grand cream around the eyes. If there is any trace of dryness in the skin encircling the eyes . . . you need to use the rich, feather-light eye cream nightly to soften and lubricate so that lines and wrinkles won't have a chance to appear.

FOR BEACH OR GARDEN

Here are a few ways to prevent those aging eye lines. Before you start to the beach or golf course . . . smooth it around your eyes. The cream won't show under your dark glasses . . . and it can be allowed to do its good work while you enjoy your favorite sports. If you are a garden sitter . . . use it, too. Even for that trip in town . . . whether it is shopping or lunching . . . use it around the eyes under your dark glasses. No one will be the wiser . . . but your eyes will know that you care and the encircling area will accept the ingratiating and softening cream with beneficial results.

The skin quickly absorbs this eye cream . . . so you need not worry about having a greasy look. We have a friend who entertains at home . . with her eyes obviously creamed. She makes sport of this individualism . . . saying that within the portals of her home her friends must bear with her desire to protect her facial loveliness. Usually the friends are charmed . . . and we are inclined to believe that they repeat the performance in their own home . . . if only for the attention it gets.

BATHE THE EYES DAILY

The eyes themselves need attention if they are to serve you well. To keep them looking brighter and feeling much more rested . . . make a daily habit, as we do, of bathing the eyes with a wonderful lotion. After a motor trip it is a good idea to use this soothing, antiseptic eye lotion which not only cleanses the eyes of any dust particles . . . but relieves that tense, strained feeling, particularly rugged in hot, sticky weather.

Even if you are a stay-at-homer who reads a lot or does a great deal of needle work . . . lessen and alleviate the eye strain and prevent a headache by bathing the eyes with this fine eye lotion. Don't look for the stars in the skies . . . look for them in your face!

GIRLS who make beauty their stock in trade . . . as Filmstress Joan Winfield must . . . know that dry eyes are not face-appealing. To avoid dryness and subsequent lines around her eyes . . . pretty Joan uses a rich, lubricating cream nightly . . . and don't her eyes show the rewards of her faithful effort? Dry eyes . . . summertime's menace . . . may be easily avoided.

For the name of this eye cream and eye lotion, phone the Beauty Dept., LIBerty 4000, except the week-end, or write to me, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Serve Berries in Pastry

By MARTHA LEE, Household Editor

WITH THE BERRY SEASON at its peak, every day is the right day for fruit desserts. Nature provides the goodness in a great variety of juice-laden favorites, and the cook provides a flaky pastry as the perfect setting. Blackberries, blueberries, gooseberries, and red raspberries make an appetizing list for the homemaker to choose from these days. Fine for health as well as for flavor, these "light" foods need the staying-quality of pastry for lasting appetite-satisfaction.

Most judges of fine food flavors agree that berries are at their tempting best when reposing in crisp pastry. There are differences of opinion as to whether cold-water pastry or hot-water pastry makes the most nearly perfect pie crust. Many cooks prefer the cold-water pastry, while others swear by the hot-water method.

For cold-water pastry, a solid fat is best, and ice water helps give a flaky texture. By this method, the fat is cut into the flour until the pieces are the size of large peas.

Hot-water pastry gives a more crumbly texture than cold-water pastry, because the shortening is more thoroughly mixed. To many, this crumbly texture is as pleasing as a flaky one.

HOT WATER PASTRY

2 cups sifted enriched flour
1 tsp. salt
2-3 cup shortening
3 to 5 tbsp. hot water

Sift together flour and salt. Add shortening to hot water and mix together. Add to flour mixture, cutting or rubbing mixture into flour. Turn out on lightly floured board. Press dough together. Roll out ⅛-inch thick. Line two 9-inch pie pans or eight 4-inch pans with pastry. Prick with fork. Bake in hot oven (450 deg. F.) 8 to 12 minutes. Cool. Makes pastry for one 2-crust 9-inch pie, two 9-inch pie shells, or eight 4-inch pies.

The delicate flavor of fresh blueberries is a rarer treat than that of most berries because their season is so short. Luckily, the frozen blueberries are almost always available, and they have the advantage of being already sweetened. Blueberry Creme Pie makes the most of the subtle flavor and color-appeal of a small amount of blueberries. Somewhat out of the ordinary is this one-crust pie with a custard cream filling, topped by a golden meringue and a ring of blueberries. The flavor of the pie is especially good because the berries are used uncooked. This pie is equally delicious when other berries are used.

BLUEBERRY CREME PIE

¾ cup sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
½ tsp. salt
2½ cups milk
2 eggs, separated
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1 pint sweetened blueberries

Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt. Place in double boiler. Add milk gradually stirring well. Cook until clear and thickened, stirring constantly. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Beat egg yolks slightly. Stir small amount of hot milk mixture into egg yolks. Add yolks to remaining milk mixture and mix well. Cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Let cool. Add vanilla extract. Pour into 9-inch baked pastry shell. Make meringue with the two egg whites reserved from the filling and ¼ cup sugar. Swirl meringue in center of pie. Bake in slow over (300 deg. F.) about 20 minutes. Arrange blue berries in a ring between meringue and edge of pie. Makes one 9-inch pie.

Evening Gown of Stripes

By EILEEN CALLAHAN

STRIPES have received a liberal education at the hands of the designers this season. Now they keep company with the most sophisticated clothes.

Among the educated stripes is the one, done in black on white, that looks the way reflections of straight lines do when a breeze ripples the water. This stripe makes one of the best evening gowns you will find for Summer dancing. Its combination of simplicity and sophistication make it right for any setting.

Mary Lewis designed the black and white striped evening gown sketched today. Stiff white pique makes a dazzling background for the waved and rippled black stripes. The bodice is drawn tight across the front and dips in back in low, curved line. The skirt is drawn up slightly from the hemline and is gathered to the back where the material is draped into a large fishtail bow. The stripes of the back drape fall lengthwise, breaking the all-around striped pattern of the gown.

Pay Minimum Boost Faces Senate Delay

WASHINGTON, July 8 (INS)—Senate leaders were said to have decided privately for "reasons of political timing" to postpone acting on legislation to increase the minimum wage until the 1948 presidential election year.

However, the House is slated to approve a bill to boost the minimum wage from 40 to 60 cents an hour before the congressional adjournment, now tentatively set for July 26.

'Love for Love' Set for Sellout at Colonial

By PEGGY DOYLE

John Gielgud, whose production of "The Importance of Being Earnest" stacked up as unalloyed perfection in the theater, returned to the Colonial last night with William Congreve's earthly classic, "Love for Love."

First produced in 1695, "Love for Love" is one of four plays by the seventeenth century playwright that have been acclaimed the wittiest which our language can boast.

This distinguishing factor as well as its great age, 252 years, may understandably have contributed to a more reverential handling of the play than was accorded the previous production. In any event, the performance did not approach the pulse-quickening excellence of the delicious-tongue-in-cheek make-believing of the "Earnest" company.

Though Boston did no ttoke "Love for Love" to its bombazine bosom as it did "Earnest," the current Gielgud production, set for a sell-out week here, is certain to unleash a Niagara of pro-and-con comment. Accustomed as the town's audiences are to sophisticated theater, the recurrent inevitable Restoration indelicacies tincturing Congreve's brilliant dialogue pinked the cheeks and lifted the eyebrows of many of the first-nighters.

Gielgud's blue-pencilling has spared them a good portion of these literary indelicacies. But bear in mind that Congreve was writing at a time when the licentiousness of Charles II and his courtiers had debauched the stage to a degree never approached before or since and yet he developed the taste to refrain from the more flagrant grossness that characterized the work of his contemporaries.

Valentine, the seventeenth century playboy of Congreve's comedy with the 'round-Robinhood's-barn involvements, ends up as a rather honorable fellow in Gielgud's playing. If we had our druthers he'd have been a charming rotter to that charming finale with the beautifully costumed company dancing as the curtain dropped.

Pamela Brown's Angelica, elegantly artificial, gives a great deal of style to the production. And so do Adrienne Allen and Marion Spencer, as Mrs. Frail and Mrs. Foresight respectively, a pair of doughty coquettes. Malcolm Keen's Sir Sampson Legend musters up a surpassing amount of indignation and gullibility.

Cyril Pitchard's lavender-tinged Tattle is a nice job of elaboration, as is Jessie Evans' uncouth country girl. As her reluctant sailor-suitor, Robert Flemyng is comically loutish. And as witty as his betters, a practice of Congreve's, is Richard Wordsworth's humorous impudent man-servant to Valentine.

Jeanetta Cochrane's costumes are all that Restoration costumes should be, and Rex Whistler's settings background them and the gifted folk inhabiting them with the appropriate elegance of that witty age.

Film Union Sues For $43,000,000

LOS ANGELES, July 8 (AP)—The Conference of Studio Unions, one of the two contending groups in Hollywood's involved labor battle, filed federal court suit for $43,000,000 damages against major motion picture producers and the rival International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

The suit, basing a request for treble damages on Sherman anti-trust law provisions, charges the producers and the IATSE with a "back-scratching" agreement in which the producers allegedly would aid the IATSE to crush the CSU and the IATSE would help the major companies kill off competition from independent producers.

Cronin-Dyer Feud Renewed Today in All-Star Setting

By AUSTEN LAKE

WITH A SHYNESS STRANGE among professional sport promoters, the National and American Leagues are soft pedaling the most attractive charm of today's stupendous, gala contest between the stars of their circuits at Chicago. This concerns the green-eyed envy which exists between the two baseball syndicates and their love for giving each other a kick-over in matters of athletic rivalry.

The two leagues manage to collaborate peacefully in question of interlocking business and generally live neighborly lives. But their jealousies are comparable with the Republican and Democratic parties on the eve of election and their wishfulness to lick the other in World Series and All Star games is as deep-seated as the urge to squabble of any two urchins of equal age.

Cronin Started It in '34

THIS YEAR FOR SOME REASON, possibly dignity, the opposing league daddies have not made any battle yells about the merits of their All-Star groups, and except that Joe Cronin and Ted Williams are among the headliners on one side and Johnny Sain and Warren Spahn on the other the game evokes the widest disinterest in Boston.

Originally the All-Star game wasn't supposed to be a test of strength, what with being trimmed with charity toward old and indignant ball players and a kind of carnival good nature. But suddenly the ugly horns of envy reared and now the papas of both sides want this one as hard as the Boston College alumni want that big annual football victory over Holy Cross, or vice versa.

In spite of the tepid tone of the publicity handouts which paint the game as a concentrated congress of baseball's most distinguished talent and a parade of personality in that ornamental spirit with which the late Flo Ziefeld used to strut his hand-picked, luscious ladies for their eye-filling beauty, there is an underlying core of small boy jealousy in today's contest.

An the reason is this;

When the game was orginally founded in 1933 in the brain of a Chicago Sports editor named Arch Ward, it was planned less as a contest than an innocent roundup of publicized characters in a Christian spirit of alms giving. Connie Mack and the late John McGraw, as deans among the managers, made the first game a harmless show devoid of any significance by shuffling their players freely for the sake of display. You may remember how Babe Ruth belted a sample homerun, being, as it was rumoured, fed a fat pitch for the purpose by Carl Hubbel of the Giants. And though the American League won 4 to 2, the Nationals said Aw Shux, it was just a lot of fun.

But the next few years, Bill Terry and Frankie Frisch, as the Nationals' bench bosses, continued to regard the game as circus spectacles or something between the Married Men and the Bachelors, Joe Cronin and Mickey Cochrane copped a sneak and aimed their heaviest guns and administered two painful spankings.

The National League felt pretty mad at Cronin for not merely playing choosies and sprayed some exasperated tears at Terry and Frisch for penny suckers and saying "just wait till next year." But the American League gave Joe and Mike a loving hug for being smart boys.

Joe's Last Crack at Eddie (?)

SO YOU SEE WHAT I MEAN? The thing which started as innocent merriment, suddenly simmered into a boiling rivalry, where it has been bubbling ever since, despite the tactful kisses which the two parties are blowing back and forth in their publicity blurbs.

You wouldn't think, as commercial people who are primarily concerned with income and outgo of their ball firms, that the club owners would get as lathered up about a game which goes on deeper than cold black type in the little red record book. But they do!

During last summer's sit down in Boston after the A. L. had humiliated the N. L. with a swashing 12-to-Ouch beating, I heard Branch Rickey, Charley Stoneham and Herb Pennock mourn about the smirch it put in the National League escutcheon and pray that next time their side would light a charge of black powder under the upstarts and blow them into the adjoining county. And though Pennock was bred and reared an American Leaguer, he was just as red-necked about it as the others, now that his cakes and coffee come from directing the Phillies. Which gives you an idea how vague baseball loyalties are when there is a dollar to be earned

There is an added incentive today for Cronin, who like women and elephants, never forgets an old slight. Because Joe is facing his 1946 World Series adversary in Eddie Dyer, the Cardinal manager, whose master-minding in the seventh game gave Joe a ten months' headache. And I have in memory's album the sight of Joe sitting fuzzy and towseled in the edge of a locker room bench, with suspicious moisture in his blue eyes and saying mournfully, "Well I guess we will have to wait till next year."

But this is next year now and the Red Sox don't appear to be going anywhere but for the bus ride. This may be Joe's last chance to even his personal vendetta with Eddie, who likewise may remember that it was Joe himself who copped the first sneak-punch in 1934. As a vendetta it looks like a stand-off, though personally I am picking the Nationals to win.

N. L. Pitchers Gun for Ted; A. L. Rated 7 to 5 Choice

CHICAGO, July 8 (AP)—Baseball's gaudiest single day show, the 14th All-Star major league game, returns to its spring-board city today with the American League's upper crust favored to squelch the National League's best before a Wrigley Field capacity crowd of 43,000.

Fair skies and 80 degree temperatures were predicted for this midsummer "dream game" which, except for the pitchers, is strictly a fan proposition for the first time since 1935. Almost 2,000,000 paying customers participated in a nationwide poll to select the teams.

There were last-minute complications to this high-geared spectacle in which, at approximately 1:30 p. m. (Chicago daylight time), lanky Ewell Blackwell, pride of the Cincinnati Reds, will explode the first pitch at American League lead-off man, George Kell, Detroit third baseman.

For one thing, American League starting hurler, Spud Chandler of the New York Yankees, established himself in a "reluctant dragon" role. He turned up in Chicago with an ailing elbow. There were reports that he might not be able to work.

Pilot Joe Cronin of the American Leaguers said he'd determine in pre-game warm-ups whether Chandler could pitch the first three innings. "If he isn't in shape," said the Boston Red Sox manager, "we'll have somebody else in there, but Chandler will be our starting choice up until then."

On the National League side, a train mishap here yesterday shook up the Philadelphia Phillies' contingent including starting second baseman Emil Verban, pitcher Schoolboy Rowe and Manager Ben Chapman, an All-Star coaching aide to Manager Eddie Dyer of the St. Louis Cardinals.

At last report Verban was in bruised condition but anxious to join the All-Star battle. Rowe was banged up and there was a chance that he might not be able to appear. Chapman, who suffered a spinal injury, said he would not be able to hit to the outfield but he would take his station on the coaching lines.

Chicago's leading bet-makers established the American Leaguers as 7 to 5 favorites to gain their 10th victory in the All-Star frolic which had its inception at Comiskey Park here in 1933. Last year the power-packed Americans drubbed the Nationals, 12-0, at Boston's Fenway Park. Bobby Feller of Cleveland, Hal Newhouser of Detroit and Jack Kramer of St. Louis, shut out the senior circuit with three hits. All were named to the original 1947 squad.

Feller's absence, due to a pulled back muscle, was the most important factor in cutting the Americs' advantage. Otherwise, on the basis of Feller's sensational All-Star record and the American League 9-4 win record, it would have been ruled "no contest."

It is expected that Cronin will follow Chandler with Lefty Newhouser and then make his final three-inning selection on the basis of the score of the game. If it's tight he might use Joe Page of New York, another capable southpaw who has been a ball of fire in recent relief chores.

Frank Shea, the Yankees' amazing rookie with an 11-2 won and lost record, is another possibility along with Early Wynn of Washington, Feller's replacement; his teammate Walt Masterson, St Louis' Jack Kramer or Detroit's Dizzy Trout. All, except Kramer, are well rested and primed for the effort.

Dyer, like Cronin, made no announcement of his second or third hurlers but each manager has to use three. The rules of the game say no pitcher can go more than three frames unless it is an extra-inning contest. Harry Brecheen, the St. Louis Cards' World Series hero, and Boston's Johnny Sain are the most logical choices to follow Blackwell's sidearm slants.

Dyer can dig into his staff and pull out another of his own Cardinals in George (Red) Munger if he needs him, for the husky righthander is well rested.

Warren Spahn, a Boston lefty who worked on relief Sunday; Brooklyn's Ralph Branca, who pitched a complete game Sunday, and Rowe, who may not be able to work, are the other National hurlers.

Home run hitting has been an important part in most of the 13 previous games and the Nationals are well protected in that department with New York's first baseman Johnny Mize who has hit 24, and catcher Walker Cooper who has hit 18 for the New York Giants. Willard Marshall, another Giant slugger who has walloped 13 homers, will be available after the starters have gone at least three innings, an all-star requirement.

Emil Verban of the Phils at second base; Marty Marion of the Cards at short; center fielder Harry Walker of the Phils and right fielder Dixie Walker of the Dodgers are not known for their power hitting. Enos Slaughter of St. Louis, the left fielder, can hit for distance as can Frank Gustine of Pittsburgh, the starting third baseman in the absence through injury of Boston's Bob Elliott, but neither are consistent home run threats.

Ted Williams, who hit two homers last year in Boston's Fenway Park and won the 1941 contest with a three-run clout in the ninth inning, will be the focal point of most of the Nationals' pitching skill. Dyer and the Card pitchers stopped him in the 1946 World Series with the shift and tight inside pitching. Teddy will be out to prove it was all a mistake.

St. Louis Browns Get '48 All-Star Game

CHICAGO, July 8 (AP)—With the 1948 All-Star game awarded to the St. Louis Browns, major league club owners and officials settled back to watch a ball game today after a series of executive sessions.

Pacific Coast League bids for recognition as a third major league on a "provisional" basis were referred yesterday to the executive council which will consider exemption of the Coast players from the annual player draft for the next "three to five years."

Charles Graham, president of the San Francisco club and chairman of the recognition committee of his league, also had scheduled a meeting today with Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Any action on the Coast League's proposal about draft exemption would have to be made before the winter meetings or it would be meaningless. The majors meet in New York in December and the draft must be held Nov. 1 according to the major-minor code.

Cuban baseball men, seeking permission to use 12 major league players in their winter league, also must await action by the executive council which will not consider the matter until December. The minor leagues already have agreed to permit a certain number of players who have not been in organized ball for more than four years to play in Cuba next winter.

Eventually it is expected that the Cuban League will be accepted into organized ball and given a definite classification.

Both leagues also heard Leonard J. Roach, a Los Angeles county supervisor, invite them to hold the All-Star game in his city's Memorial Coliseum with the hope that a major league franchise eventually might be shifted to the Pacific Coast. His invitation also was referred to the executive council although the 1948 game already had been awarded to the Browns.

Ford Frick was re-elected president of the National League for a four-year term, the longest possible under the League constitution. Frick has been president of the League since 1934.

The National League also added a new rule providing that night games, halted by lighting failure, must be resumed at the point of stoppage at a future date and concluded as a "suspended" game.

Player representatives, Johnny Murphy of the Red Sox and Dixie Walker of Brooklyn, held a one-hour session with the members of the executive council. They discussed widening the scope of the players' pension fund to credit ex-GIs with war-time service even if they had not been in the majors for the required 60 days before they went into service.

Somebody Should Have Told Gallico About Snow Goose

By PAUL GALLICO

THERE IS A GENT loose in our section of the country whom I have not yet been able to locate or identify, due to press of other business, but when I do, he had better be prepared, because he owes me $660,000, and I would like to collect so that I can pay off a few small bills and, quite naturally, give the rest to the government.

This money is owing to me on a horse, and when I explain the circumstances of the debt to you, I am sure you will agree with me that it is quite proper and legal, and the sooner the person comes forth and hands it over, the better for all concerned, and, besides, maybe this animal is scheduled to run again soon and I will want to have some funds to get another small bet down.

It seems that some party or parties acquired a beast of the type which enjoys contending with other animals on a dirt track for cash and honor, and this individual bestowed the name of Snow Goose upon this horse and that is the name under which it operates.

Now there is no law which says that an owner cannot confer any monicker he likes upon his faithful steed, always providing that some other carrier has not been similarly named, and I am not planning to make a legal issue out of this. I maintain this is a moral debt, and therefore much stronger than if the law were involved. For some six or seven years ago I wrote a little story entitled "The Snow Goose," which later was brought out as a book and to date has sold more than half a million copies in the U. S., Great Britain, the Antipodes, wherever they read and in foreign countries, and is about to become a movie picture next year.

Now you may well imagine I have a soft spot in my heart for that title, not to mention the hard profit on it I may be said to be sentimentally inclined towards anything involving that big black and white Canadian honker.

SO ALONG comes some guy and names his geegee after this bird. I have no way of ascertaining at the moment whether he named it after the story or not, but I do not feel that this changes the aspect of moral obligation. It was his duty to drop me a line "Hey, Gallico: I have just acquired a goat which I have named Snow Goose. I understand you did pretty well with a story by that name. Maybe you would like to have a small bet down when I send this hayburner out for more than exercise."

Naturally, I will not wager less than one hundred dollars for sentiment's sake on this bag of glue, particularly since public opinion is against its chances of finishing one circuit of the track on the same day it starts.

But I do not know that such a horse exists. So what happens? Snow Goose starts in a plater's race in Maryland and wins paying 60 to 1. That is $6000 for me, if only I know about it.

Now I have six grand, and naturally follow the subsequent career of Snow Goose with increased interest. I would have noted that Snow Goose was entered in a merry-go-round at Belmont. Now naturally, being a graduate of the sports world, I will know that Snow Goose having won once, is moved up in his class with the jock probably lugging some extra bars of lead in the saddle bags to satisfy the handicapper. So I will have nothing to do with the area of his nose in making my wager. I will shoot the whole 6000 back on him to run third, or show.

SO WHAT happens? Snow Goose runs third at Belmont and pays 110 to 1, to show. That's $660,000 for my end, except I only hear about this noble steed last week when it is all over, and at no time have had I so much as a dime involved.

I want my $660,000.

I feel very strongly about this and am prepared to make an issue out of it. Defrauding the Treasury of the United States, that's what it is, and the proprietor of this rapid flea-bag had better make his peace with the Government, if not me, for depriving it of [illegible] in taxes which I [illegible] of only he'd warned me about naming the [illegible].

170 Tee Off In State Amateur

A field of 170 entries teed off in the qualifying round of the 49th annual State Amateur golf tournament today at the Commonwealth Country Club.

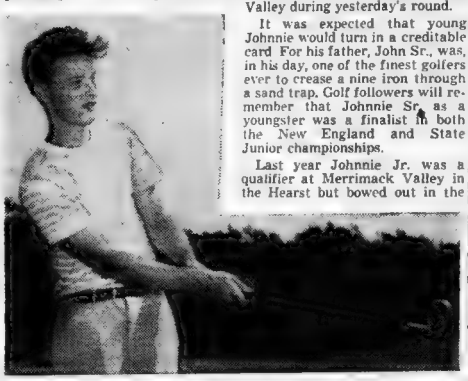
With Ted Bishop, defending titlist, not entered because of business pressure, the tourney appeared to be wide open.

Rated as pre-tournament favorites were Bobby Knowles, last year's medalist who recently shot a competitive 66 over the deep rough and narrow fairways, and Charlie Mulcahy, who has won both the Country Club and Kittansett Cups and was finalist in the Lincoln Memorial at Ekwanok Country Club, Manchester, Vt., last week-end.

Nies 73 Tops Hearst Junior Trials

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

Johnnie Nies, Jr., of United Shoe, has the distinction of shooting the best round of golf of any of the three qualifying rounds of the Hearst New England Junior championship. The 17-year-older from Swampscott High peppered a 38-35—73 at Merrimack Valley during yesterday's round.



JOHNNIE NIES, JR., OF UNITED SHOE
Paces Hearst Junior Golfers at Merrimack Valley

It was expected that young Johnnie would turn in a creditable card For his father, John Sr., was, in his day, one of the finest golfers ever to crease a nine iron through a sand trap. Golf followers will remember that Johnnie Sr. as a youngster was a finalist in both the New England and State Junior championships.

Last year Johnnie Jr. was a qualifier at Merrimack Valley in the Hearst but bowed out in the match play N. E. final at Woodland.

"I am hitting the ball a lot longer this season," said Johnnie. "I am sure that things will be different at Woodland this year. One year of experience to a young golfer, like myself, is like five years of practice for an older fellow.

Jimmie Quinn, Kernland G. C., who finished with a 75 for his 18 holes of qualifying play, is another junior who is back for his second crack at the Hearst crown.

Jimmie, for two years the captain of the Salem High golf team, was nipped by Paul Butler in last year's match play.

Red-headed Tom Mahan, Jr., who combined a 39—36 for a total of 75, is the son of the pro at United Shoe. Tommy was also in the 1946 Hearst match play round.

Bill Palm, United Shoe, was 39-40—79. Bob Wallace, Unicorn, posted a 37-43—80. The last three qualifiers were all 81's. They were Larry Warren, Woburn; Dick Costello, United Shoe, and Bob Magee, Charles River. Bob is the present caddie champ at C. R. and one of Ted Bishop's favorite bag handlers.

The next round in the New England Hearst championships will be held at Wachusett Country Club, West Boylston, Mass., Friday morning. The round will begin at 8:30 a. m. The finals are carded for Woodland on July 28, 29 and 30.

All competitors must be over 13 and under 19 years of age. There is no entry fee.

Hearst Sandlot Finals at Dilboy Field

The ninth in the series of New England sandlot baseball championships which will be played at Dilboy Field, Somerville, will rate as one of the finest of the entire Boston Record-American-Sunday Advertiser program.

Mayor Eddie Bradley of Somerville, himself an ardent sports fan, is happy that Somerville will be the scene of one of the Hearst sandlot trials.

"We have plenty of top baseball material in Somerville and throughout Everett, Medford, Malden and the other communities," said Bradley. "Dilboy Field, with its enclosed playing grounds, is an ideal place to hold such a tryout."

Francis J. Mahoney, the director of Somerville's recreation commission, and Charlie Kelley, another member of the Somerville commission, will work with the Hearst papers in this sandlot baseball endeavor.

Three boys will be selected from the Somerville trials. These boys will be eligible to compete in the Hearst All-New England final which will be played at Fenway Park, July 29. The N. E final will be played as a co-feature with a Red Sox-Cleveland single game.

A board consisting of Joe Cronin, Lou Boudreau and Claude Davidson will select the two best ball players from this Fenway final. These boys will then take the seven-day trip to New York City for the National Hearst sandlot final, Aug. 13. The two boys who made the trip to N. Y. last year are now both affiliated with major league ball clubs.

All competitors must be over 15 and under 19 years of age. There is no entry fee.

WONDERLAND REVERE

Red Hot Fishing Spots Often Run Very Cold

By DARK MONTREAL

A few nights ago I set out to show an angling friend a spot where, with any degree of skill and fortune, he could take a dozen striped bass in an evening of fishing. I knew it could be done because I had done it only two nights before and the fish still were there. The result: No fish for either of us on this particular night and what's more, no signs of fish.

So I knew what Frank E. Dunn, director of Hearst Advertising Service, means when he says he feels let-down and embarrassed by the results of a recent trip to New Bruswick with three other prominent Boston anglers. Frank had excellent fishing for big brook trout out of Gordon Tweedie's camp at Junniper last year and this year he went along with Roger Branham, Bucky Winslow and Asa Osborn. They went in high expectation. They caught a great many trout. But they caught no big ones.

I asked Dunn to provide an outline of the trip and he sent along the following interesting account:

"We were at Tweedie's the week of June 22 which is about 10 days too early for the salmon run in that part of the Miramichi. However, it was not our intention to fish salmon as we were heading for a rather famous feeder, called Beedle Brook, nine miles up the Miramichi from Tweedie's camp.

"This is a rather spectacular trip. Each man has a guide and a canoe, and the expedition starts early in the morning up the Miramichi with guides poling against swift water. We stopped at some of the famous salmon holes on the way up just in case some of the runners might be on hand. It wasn't true this year, or last year—we got nothing but a few small trout on the way up.

"We reached the mouth of Beedle Brook about four in the afternoon—left the canoes and walked inland following the brook for about a half mile. The guides got the canoes up over rather tough water. However, they arrived about the same time as the sports at a very lovely spot at which Tweedie has two fine log cabins—one for guides and one for sports. The evening meal was gotten out of the way as quickly as possible and we all hit the brook for evening fishing.

"The pools measure anywhere from 150 yards across and 200 yards long down to 15 feet across and 20 feet long. The stream winds its way through a wild country up to an enormous beaver dam eight miles from the brook camp.

There are sections where it narrows to five or six feet across, heavily aldered and almost impossible to fish. I saw plenty of large trout streaking away from the canoe.

"We stayed on the brook three days. As I told you, the fishing was poor. The largest fish taken by the party was about two pounds, whereas last year I personally in three days took six large trout—two over four pounds, two over three and two over two and a half pounds. Small trout are plentiful—7, 8 and 9 inch pan fish. As a matter of fact they become a nuisance knocking down the large bivisible flies which we use to attract the big fellows.

"Needless to say, the water was high which was unquesionably the answer to the indifference on the part of the big fellows—plenty of feed.

"We broke camp to go back to Tweedie's base to try some of the nearby salmon holes. In a day and a half's fishing of the pools within a couple of miles of the base camp, Roger Branham raised two salmon—hooked one, held him for 25 minutes before the fish got rid of the fly."

A great many anglers hesitate to recommend fishing spots to their friends lest they encounter situations similar to those brought about in the cases of Dunn and myself. Yet every true angler knows that a "hot" spot can go cold for any one of a dozen reasons and the man who is willing to share good fishing fortune with his friends is indeed a friend though the fish prove not to rise. What's more, I talked with the other members of Dunn's party and they had a grand trip. They know the big ones were there.

Post-Holiday 'Handles' High Despite Conflict of Tracks

By DAVE WILSON

If opening-day attendances and mutuel handles mean anything, the conflicting Suffolk Downs and Lincoln Downs meetings, which got under way yesterday, are both destined for financial success. At East Boston, a crowd of 17,257 wagered a total of $917,366, while down in "Poor Little Rhode Island," an estimated throng slightly under 20,000, including 9840 paid customers and 5000 gate crashers, pushed $432,513 through the mutuel wickets.

It is estimated by those close to the scenes at the rival tracks that Suffolk can show a substantial profit on a daily mutuel turnover of $800,000 and that Lincoln can do likewise on slightly less than half that amount. Coming on the heels of a two-day holiday when a decided drop in wagering is to be expected, yesterday's handles must have come as pleasant surprise to both Judge John Pappas and B. A. Dario, the respective heads of Suffolk and Lincoln.

One interesting phase of yesterday's mutuel plays at both Suffolk and Lincoln was that the best single race handle at each track was recorded in the sixth and featured event. At East Boston the sum of $143,185 was wagered on the race won by Mrs. E. Augustus' Blue Yonder, while at Lincoln a total of $75,264 was handled in the race that went to H. E. Simpson's Boston Man . . . This proves conclusively that New England fans know their horses as well as thoroughbred followers in Maryland, Kentucky, New York and other racing states, and should be the tipoff of the race track managements to stress quality rather than quantity in planning future race cards.

Jackie's Girl, winner of yesterday's second race at Suffolk Downs and paying $60.00, was a big overlay due to the fact that the public knew little or nothing about the record of the mare's jockey, Luis Calderon who had previously ridden with success on Canadian tracks. Calder is a native of Puerto Rico and he plied his trade at Pascoag several years ago. Favorites did all right the opening day at Suffolk when four out of the eight graced the winner's circle.

Joe Louis May Retire Undefeated

NEW YORK, July 8 (INS)—The possibility loomed today that Joe Louis may retire from the ring undefeated next January without another defense of his heavyweight title.

Sol Strauss, acting promoter of the 20th Century Sporting Club, rejected a September bout between Louis and Olle Tandberg, surprise winner over Joe Baksi, although the winner had been guaranteed a title shot.

Strauss will attempt to persuade Louis to meet the winner of the Elmer (Violent Ray)-Ezzard Charles July 25 fight. Failing in that, he will try to salvage a contender from some sort of an elimination tournament involving Ray, Charles, Tandberg and Baksi, but it would not be possible to pair the victor with Louis this year because there would not be enough time to ballyhoo a title bout.

5 UMPIRES QUIT NORTHERN LEAGUE

RUTLAND, Vt., July 8 (AP)—Leo F. Willson of St. Albans, president of the Independent Northern League, today sought local men as umpires after the resignation of Umpire-in-Chief Daniel Silva of Everett, Mass., and four other arbiters, over pay demands.

The five resigned last night when they said their request for an increase from their present $500 monthly salary to $550 was refused.

League officials said that of the four other umpires on the staff two had agreed to stay on the job and two had not been reached last night. Four contests are scheduled for the eight-team loop today.

Willson said that "if the umpires are going to run the league then they had better get out," citing a league by-law which sets the salary at $300 and adding that the circuit could not afford to grant the raise.

The other four who resigned, all high school coaches, were: Charles "Buzz" Harvey, Nashua, N. H., former Holy Cross athlete; Marty McDonough, Fitchburg, Mass.; Tom O'Brien, Athol, Mass., and Salvadore Somma, Mt. St. Joseph's Academy, Rutland.
